HOW CBD WORKS IN THE BRAIN

+ Dopamine is often referred to as the “REWARD CHEMICAL” because it's often released as a reward.

+ CBD interacts with your nervous system and your BRAIN IS STIMULATED WITH A RELEASE OF DOPAMINE.

+ USING CBD DAILY WILL HELP YOUR BODY TO PRODUCE EXTRA SEROTONIN. Serotonin is a neurotransmitter that is associated with mood and pain sensations. CBD has also been connected to relieving inflammation in the body.

WHAT IS CBD

and how does it affect your body?

CBD stands for Cannabidiol, a big word that describes a specific compound found in the cannabis plant.

Yep, we said cannabis, but not that kind of cannabis.

CBD occurs in both types of plants, but while hemp may have trace amounts (less than .3%) of THC, the chemical compound found in marijuana that gets you “high,” it has zero psychoactive affect. CBD can be cultivated and extracted to provide all of the benefits of cannabis, without the THC.

CBD can be taken orally or topically and works with CB1 and CB2 receptors. Cannabinoid receptors are part of the endocannabinoid system, which is involved in a variety of physiological processes affecting appetite, pain-sensation, mood, and memory.

CBD tinctures and related hemp products are helping people in many ways. A growing number of people are discovering the health benefits of CBD and related cannabinoids without any of the side effects of high intoxicating THC.
